The death of Mrs. Minnie Cooper Pate occurred at her home on East Penn Street Wednesday morning, April 23, as a result of years of patient suffering.

Deceased was born at Everett on August 2, 1875, and was the daughter of David M. and Sarah Cooper (latter deceased).

On September 17, 1896, Miss Cooper was married to Fred C. Pate of Bristol, Tenn., to whom were born four children, three of whom survive their mother, William, Edgar and Virginia, of Bedford. Mrs. Pate is also survived by her father and step-mother, Mrs. Myrtle Cooper, and two brothers, Edward L. and Joseph H. Cooper, all of Tippecanoe City, O.

In her church relationship Mrs. Pate was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church her entire life, and was an example in Christian grace of patient endurance during the most trying vicissitudes of her life as an invalid.

Charitable in thought, word and deed, considering others rather than self; loyal to her home and the duties of motherhood as well as public spirited to the extent of active interest in all works for the uplifting of humanity, she was a true type of womanhood of whom it may be said: "She has fought a good fight, she has kept the faith" and has entered into the just reward of the faithful.

At half-past 2 o'clock yesterday morning he died at the hospital.

Mr. Eicholtz's remains were brought to Bedford last evening on the 4:23 train. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. It will be a Masonic funeral. Obituary next week.

Mrs. Mary McGirr Miss Mary McGirr, who for many years made her home with her nephews, Francis, Michael and James McGirr near Belden, died last Friday. She was the daughter of Francis and Mary Owen McGirr, and was in her 88th year.

About two years ago Miss McGirr fell and dislocated her hip, from which she never really recovered. Miss McGirr had a wonderful memory, which she retained until the time of her death; always glad to see her friends of whom she had a great number, both old and young. She was a most kind neighbor, and a staunch and true friend.

The funeral was held Monday morning at St. Thomas' Catholic Church, Rev. W. E. Downes officiating.

Savits-Guthridge At the Church of God parsonage, Saxton, April 16, John Savits of near Saxton and Miss Elizabeth Guthridge of near Kiddlesburg were united in marriage by Rev. F. W. McGuire. The groom is a well known farmer in the upper part of Huntingdon County and the best wishes of his many friends go with him and his young bride.

HUNTERS' LICENSE LAW

Bill Signed by Governor and Goes Into Effect at Once.

The Hunters' License bill was signed by Governor Tener last Friday. The bill prohibits the hunting of any wild birds or wild animals protected by the State game laws without a license. This license must be obtained from any County Treasurer and upon payment of the fee of $1 the hunter is entitled to what is termed a "resident hunters' license" and a tag bearing the license number. The license expires with the close of the year. The tag, which is to be issued to the County Treasurers by the Game Commission, shall contain the license number in figures at least one inch high and the tag must be worn by licensed hunters while hunting on the sleeve between the elbow and the shoulder. Justices of the Peace are permitted to issue licenses and to charge an extra fee of fifteen cents.

Only United States citizens, residents of Pennsylvania and their sons, may be licensed. No person under 14 years of age can receive a license and persons under 16 must have the written consent of their parents or guardians. Hunting without a license is punishable by a fine of $20 for each offense, each day to be considered a separate offense. Resistance to arrest for violation of the act makes a hunter liable to a fine of $100.

Fifty per cent. of the revenue derived shall be applied by the Legislature to the payment of bounties for the destruction of noxious animals at the rate of $1 for each mink, $2 for each weasel or fox and $4 for each wildcat.

County Treasurers must make return to the State Treasurer of all fees except ten cents allowed for the issuance of each license.

Baseball The boys have been working on the diamond getting it in shape for the opening game, which will be announced in these columns later. They are also busy soliciting subscriptions for cash, so help them along as money makes the wheels go, and Bedford this season has the stuff that can take anything on high, and sufficient proof has been given to assure the fans that the aggregation, under command of Henry Leasure, will be a pennant contender and capture the 1913 flag.

There is at present an old indebtedness of about $250, mostly incurred since the opening of our Northside Park in 1911, for fences, rents and equipment, which we hope can be easily covered by contributions, even though they be a sacrifice, as a sacrifice is a part of the game and often saves the day.

The boys are very eager to rid themselves of this old indebtedness and to have sufficient funds in the treasury, as a guarantee, when arranging with a visiting team for a game, which gate receipts should at least cover all expenses.

All paid subscriptions, as well as disbursements, will be published by our treasurer next week, and after each game receipts and expenses will also be published.

Just think of it! We have had no games since last Fair week. Is it any wonder we grow nervous and grouchy, but now the umpires will soon give forth their yells of "Play Ball!"

The new team ought to be able to show us something right away that will make us forget our cold weather discontent; so get busy and have your shouting apparatus ready for the opening day, for our prophecy is that 1913 will be the most interesting and exciting, as well as the most prosperous year, in the history of the sport.

The Management.

Visits Laguna, an Indian Village, Founded in 1699 by Refugees From Acoma and Zuni.

New Mexico

The first dim rays of light through the window discouraged a stir. When our eyes opened sometime later there was no difference in the hazy atmosphere. A wide awake observance revealed a drowned country, submerged meadows, ash grey skies, a country tainted with the attempts at agriculture, and occasional lumps of clay with a kerchief waving above upon an imitative washline. Only after seeing a human form stooped with age or pains real and fancied, go about the cube of earth in a listless fashion, did it occur that they were examining their rain blanching domiciles, the same sight being repeated at short intervals as the train moved along. These were homes of the Indians unadorned with the fastidiousness of even the cabin of an air-line pioneer, mere clay imitations of a flat-topped bake oven of colonial days. I wondered if the inmates of those rains washed bits of architecture nestled besides the stream, had not been driven out during the night, as musk rats driven from their burrows when the creek was bank-full. If they had not, could they be dry? A little village with a dozen swirls of smoke from freshly kindled fires, and as many members of that communal life, informed that they, those Indians, had only taken the first or second degree in that morning's rising schedule. Statterly women and disorderly men and children approached the gurgling stream for the breakfast wash. At times the sights were highly amusing, interesting, educational, with a sudden spurt of indecency now and then.

The conductor scarcely knew whether to advise an attempt to reach Acoma that morning. At intervals, the rain came down in torrents and the sky cleared the threatening clouds away again. We had been encouraged to telegraph ahead for information, but lethargy had its sway, and little benefit would have resulted as we learned later. No one could tell but that rain fell heavily on the divide throughout the night, and maybe now was drenching the very town where next we wished to stop. If it were, if only the conductor could tell us, (and they were very obliging, no less so than playing the part of host with tourists as guests) it would be no more of use to stop in hopes of reaching the Acoma pueblo, than it had been in trying to cross the swollen stream on the way to the Petrified Forests. Surely we were traveling through space and no more advised of our fortune than if on a trip to the moon. The West was truly the land of long distances. New Mexico, two and a half times the size of our Keystone State, was no exception. Its population, with one human form for every twenty-three of ours, had the proportional effect of making the signs of habitation fifty times as sparse. It was surprising to see a horse. A half hour passed on before more Indian sights appeared. This time they were out inspecting corn fields battling with the weeds. The crops did not look promising, perhaps due to a drought.

Over and over again I have referred to a change in scenes, each one novel and interesting in its own peculiar way, until mere mention of something new would almost be monotonous. It would be most natural to expect something new at every turn, but not all new things appeal to one's senses of the historic, the scientific, the classic or the socialistic. Pace the streets of Chicago, and every step brings something new and yet each item is a member of the kindred city species. Stroll through the forests; every glimpse of nature is a painted scene of trees and decorative shrubs and herbs, it is all plant life and seldom calls to mind more than our own experiences of those, perhaps, of Muir and Linnaeus. A ramble through the West does more. No sooner have the memories of historic men of fame deserted us, as we follow the tributaries of the Mississippi, than the marvels of science claim our time just to be averted in an instant by the aesthetic in life. The fauna entertain and then the flora. Man's ingenuity captivates the eye and the ear and then natural waters claim their share of time. The majestic allures; the homes of men of letters charm; the product of the Dark Ages lifts the curtain high; art and landscape blend in with this new country, new because it deals with the history of a different race. New Mexico and Arizona young in statehood, are old in civilization all its own. The wealth of the aborigines was sought for in the period of this country's discoverer. They were an ancient people then and much more so now. Associations were rich and plentiful because of vivid tales of frontier Indian life handed down by pioneers. And historians too, had done their share in picturing the Sunset Land of a race that once was free. Why not tarry awhile and verify the trains of images carried about regarding this very historic people? Laguna was the nearest station to the pueblos of Acoma previously mentioned. At the latter place, the best preserved of the more than twenty remnants of pueblo Indian architecture still stood. We hoped to reach that town peopled with the aboriginal inhabitants, an intelligent, complex, industrious and independent race anomalous among North American natives. We risked a stop at Laguna at five-thirty that morning. To our left lay one of the three most important chambered, communal villages known as pueblos. There was no sign of life. The agent at the depot was the only man alive. Hoover and I were the only ones that alighted, and as the train rolled off, the conductor assured us of some revelations.

We inquired for a hotel. There was no such thing in the town. Not a restaurant or a boarding house. The next train East was due after four of the afternoon. The livery man was next important. I knocked at the door, but no response, altho there might have been for I caught sight of closing eyelids of an opossum playing Indian lying on the porch cot. The stillness seemed only to intensify as we wandered around without a living thing in sight. The little native store was closed. The grist mill was dead. A summer day was breaking and good for that; it was the one thing encouraging just then, Acoma lay fourteen miles away, with the day promising, we hoped as early birds to catch the worm.

Walking westward along the tracks, an Indian woman and a little girl appeared. Each had a pail. They were well dressed, especially the girl. We followed at some distance to learn their mission. To the left in a lowland lay several cows surrounded by a thatched fence of twigs and poles. Soon they were through with the milking. The unpainted gate was closed and the large pail found a graceful pedestal, the woman's head. The girl in blue calico and plaid hair ribbons followed suit. Up the slope they went with dangling arms toward the town, all un mindful of their visitors and lookers-on. A neat, nicely cornered dwelling of clay stood in the foreground within which they disappeared. The trim, cleanly bearing of the whole drew us on with confidence that here a morning lunch might be obtained.

I cannot give the particulars on how we failed. The sun was bright now and other natives gradually appeared. Stepping round this building the figure of an elderly woman bent over her work as she rested upon her knees. The rock on which she knelt was bare and her knees were bare too. The inclination of this natural table, for such it served, was more restful than if horizontal. To her left lay a tuft of straw, and a pile of clay to the right. Her hands in wash-tub style clung to a stone in the shape of a triangular prism, and the rubbing movements back and forth served to mix the straw with clay. A moment's intermission brought a "left handful" of straw and a "right handful" of clay, and then the rubbing was resumed. She never noticed us even though hard by. Never did her eyes raise from her work while grinding or plastering the product upon the wall of the dwelling. Industry must have been her watchword.

As we moved away a young man (white) issued from the village evidently somewhat perturbed in spirit. He warned us concerning carrying cameras and using them at random. I did not have mine with me, but we went back to the station and then to the liveryman's home again. A well dressed Indian lady (she was too much of an American in courtesy to be named a "Squaw") responded at the door. Her husband (a white man) was not at home, and she feared Acoma could not be reached due to the heavy rains. We called on the miller (whose wife was an Indian), but he was too busily engaged in loading a car with flour to escort a party of tourists in his automobile, and beside this pretext he planted the remark, "Why the machine would sink hub-deep into the sand". The strongholds of our hopes were shattered. Another opportunity appeared in the form of a native with distorted vision, middle stature, strongly built but so clumsy as to border on deformity and give all his motions the ungainly awkwardness of a left legged and left handed man. His pair of horses sympathized with their master, and the wagon, well, it needed the power of the Crayfish-Restoration of Limbs. He, in broken English, offered his services. Now there was three things to consider: a threatening nimbus cloud, price, and no guaranty of landing us back in Laguna by train time in the evening. As I look upon the scene now, I regret that we did not hazard all and "take him up" at what he could do, even if we had been detained. For some reason then the offer appeared infected and Acoma was dismissed from our minds.

Charged with a camera, we revisited Laguna, meaning "Lake." The town was founded in 1699 by refugees from Acoma and Zuni, on a high rock near the San Jose River. Several great battles between the Navajos and Apaches were fought here. The streets were not paved. There was no necessity since the whole area was a sloping rock. Of course our way we wended slowly permitting time to watch the children in their games. The women folk had gone in hiding, but were bold enough to cringe upon the tiers above or peep from behind the bars that served as windows. We did not know if they welcomed us or if we were regarded as invaders. While stooping to examine one of their clay, bee hive shaped ovens, the man who offered the trip to Acoma came into view. Both of us leisurely approached him while he proceeded with his wood chopping. Without saying a word he exposed the sharp bit of his axe in a mocking, undignified manner and in a moment more had entered the house. That cooled the zeal of the fellow travelers somewhat but a moment later we were trying our camera on several children playing in the sun. The keen, dark eyes of the mothers set beneath broad and shaggy eyebrows, were altogether satisfied when one of the tots ran to the window and showed her what he had in the palm of his hand. At last the way was opened and a general reception by old and young followed. One very old squaw insisted in having us accompany her to her quarters and we followed. To tell of her ceremonies and the surprising cleanliness within her home requires too much detail. We were treated to apples which were doubly welcome, our morning meal having been very light indeed. Probably a half hour more, in the midst of this group had not harmed us, but we were satisfied in having eaten within an Indian's home and had learned somewhat of their simple way of living.

Corn and jerked meat hung in the sunshine freely swaying with the light breeze. The population became more free and mounted up and down the ladders. One housewife prevailed upon us to allow time for showing her gaudy colored blankets made by the Navaho tribe. These were real gems worth approximately a hundred dollars, judging the price asked by the makers of such treasures. An old man thin and lank in years sat astride a strip of leather tanned with hair still fast. The deluge of summer's heat beat upon him as he worked on his job. His actions implied partial blindness. In an undertone he mumbled merrily, but the words were shed softly. He did not see us altho we watched until the hair were all removed from the leather. Odd sights and scenes became more numerous. Large curtains were

BE A CHARMING WOMAN

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charms of a beautiful woman lie in her hair. Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of the "400" are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre, and strength to the hair.

Up to a few years ago PARISIAN Sage could hardly be obtained in America. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in America. F. W. Jordan, Jr., sells it in Bedford for 50 cents a bottle, and guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair; to stop falling hair, eradicate dandruff. Adv.

A surprise. They adorned an apartment that was no less clayey than its neighbors. Surely the vacation children had brought home this idea, and estimating from the distinct departure of clothing worn by many, a goodly number of boys and girls had seen a better world.

The sexton of the adobe Presbyterian mission had left the town and the key was not available. Laddered to the roof, flat of course as all the others were, and up we went to get a view of the surrounding country. This building was upon the highest point of the ledge of rock upon which the entire town was built. The men had gone to the fields and ranches herding their flocks of sheep and cattle. Custom sent them nearly all out in the spring of the year, to return in the late summer season with the herds ready for market, the receipts being distributed among the various families. During the winter, they all, numbering several hundred, lived together. Other men labored on the railroad, while the older women worked at pottery making, the wares being sold to the tourists from the heads of the younger women as the trains came in. They were not so poor after all. Eight thousand acres of good land, irrigated by themselves after the government had constructed three dams for their benefit, was no small item. The lands of these Pueblos consist of grants from the Mexican government and also purchases made by themselves, but held in the community. Their chief enemies are the Mexicans who constantly encroach upon them and try to get a foothold. White men other than the agents of the government are not allowed within the communal district, unless they marry Indian women. Three such families lived within the town, two of whom I previously mentioned, the third being postmaster and proprietor of an Indian trading and curio store.

It is needless to say that revelations had crowned that day. After becoming acquainted, we were extremely pleased to observe the general benevolence. Crowds of people gradually gathered about the depot. The girls in full deerskin leggings attire were there with baskets of apples or bits of dainty pottery decorated in Indian art. One old, old fellow rich in the experiences of hunting ground and battlefield, and filled with the pride of his string of beads and relics, smiled and offered for sale his homemade bows and arrows. He was typical, and altho wrinkled deeply with scars of age, was rather attractive. His English was very poor which robbed us of our explanation for the reason of taking his picture. One impertinent rover made things interesting for us during the last hour, and even to this day I must believe him to be a Carlisle degenerate. He knew something about the Pennsylvania School, but was diplomatic enough to reserve his knowledge. His antics branded him as one of the punctuation marks of that day's story. The early sunset greeted the return of those interesting people to their homes, as the "Santa Fe" withdrew them from our sight. (Continued next week.)

Helping a Brother

Suddenly the man with the thin beard, who was eating his lunch on a table, reached across the table, touched the button in the lapel of the coat worn by the man directly opposite him, and gave him the grip of the secret order to which they both belonged.

"Brother," he said, "I see you're in need, and to live up to my sworn duty I am compelled to—"

"In need!" interrupted the other, "In need of what?"

"Of somebody to tell you that a knife is not the proper implement to use when you are eating corned beef hash."

By prompt action half a dozen waiters quelled the disturbance that began immediately, but they were too late to prevent the destruction of about $10 worth of tableware.—Chicago Tribune

Seeding and Using Rape

The ground should be thoroughly fitted. Plow early. If you turn under a sod, roll or drag; if not, usually the harrow and the spring rains will make a good seed bed; but harrowing should be thorough enough to get the ground well firmed.

Manuring rape pays, as does also a light liming, though not necessary to success. If you want to lime lightly seed the rape through the drill, using the grass box, sloping the dropping board to throw seed in front of the hoes, wire down the lever so as to cover up the seed about 3/4 inch, and feed to capacity air slaked lime from the fertilizer box. Water slaked lime will do, but air slaked is better.

Seed right after oats seeding time. Broadcast from 4 to 5 1/2 pounds per acre and harrow in with the spike tooth. The better the condition of the seed bed the less seed should be used.

If the stand is not satisfactory springtooth it out and reseed, seed costs but 30c per acre; and it is more economic to reseed a poor patch than to let it go.

It is better not to turn the shotes in till the rape is 8 inches high.

Heavy seeding tends to an undesirable form of growth, and early pasturing injures the plant.

During the pasturing season hogs should have free access to water, and sheep should have salt.

Rape can be cut green and fed to milk cows with good results, but should be fed after milking to prevent possible foreign taste in the milk.

The best results with shotes on rape are where they are given about a one-third ration of corn also.

Where soy beans are grown, and shotes turned from rape into soy beans the corn ration can be cut further or even omitted; and the shotes finished off on corn.

Where there are two cornfields it is a very good plan to seed down one to rape and the other to soy beans at the last cultivation; turn the hogs into the rape first after corn harvest; then into the soy beans; and then, when they have finished the soy beans, finish them off on corn. It makes late butchering but heavy hogs.

For this sort of work the black seeded soy beans are the best; and because of its ability to hold its seed, the Wilson soy bean is recommended for this particular purpose.

And no wonder, when he offers to refund your money if it doesn't cure any disease of the kidneys, liver or bladder, backache, sideache, nervousness or any weakness of the kidneys. But Thompson's Barosma has made so many almost miraculous cures that Ed. D. Heckerman is pretty certain not to have any returns.

Here are a few instances: Frank K. Sturges, Sturtevant, Crawford County, Pa., was cured of Bright's disease six years ago and only took six bottles. He has had no bad symptoms since.

"I had kidney trouble and enlargement of the liver and spleen. I took Thompson's Barosma. The first bottle reduced the measurement around my stomach from 45 to 36 inches, and several bottles completely cured me."—M. S. Langworthy, Tyroneville, Pa.

After suffering the terrible agony of rheumatism for ten years, being compelled to use crutches, J. N. Duan, Troy Center, Pa., after all hope had left him and he had no faith in any remedy, took six bottles of Thompson's Barosma, threw away his crutches and went to work for the first time in ten years.

These statements are absolutely true, and the Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa., will prove it. Then why should anyone suffer in the face of such facts? How can they suffer when Ed. D. Heckerman guarantees to refund the money if a cure is not effected? Thompson's Barosma, 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

HARRISBURG LETTER

Work Being Done by Both Branches of the State Legislature

THE DIRECT PRIMARIES ACT

Other Important Bills—Legislation That Means a Great Forward Movement in Human Life.

Harrisburg, April 22.—It is generally conceded that the most important bill now before the Legislature is the direct primaries act. It has already passed the House, and is being held with others in the election committee of the Senate by gangster Jim McNichol. It does away with all state conventions for the nomination of candidates for any office, and puts the power directly in the hands of the people. It would be a death blow to machine politics in every party in Pennsylvania if it should pass.

Probably the next most important is the corrupt practices act, which will likely pass the House this week. It practically eliminates money from politics by prohibiting the present watcher system, and the dissemination of information to voters, under which it is possible now to spend any sum in a campaign.

Probably third in importance is the assistance clause, by which any voter can ask for aid in preparing his ballot, and anyone can be called into the booth to assist him. The proposed act eliminates this privilege, and provides that only on account of physical disability can a voter ask for help, and then it must be an election officer who goes into the booth to aid him. It was conclusively proven that in the campaign of 1910 for Governor, 40,000 men in Philadelphia alone had assistance in marking their ballots. As Tener only had 33,000 majority in the state, it is easily seen that it was, possibly, these 40,000 gang marked ballots which really put the present administration in Harrisburg into power.

Fourth in importance is the constitutional convention act, permitting voters to decide in the next November election whether they wish a new constitution, and if so, to elect delegates to the convention that would prepare it.

All these proposed laws have passed the House, except the corrupt practices act, and are now in the hands of the Senate, where, unless public sentiment forces the Senate to act, they will all no doubt be killed. The bills are all vindictive of platform pledges, and the Senate is simply disregarding what the people of Pennsylvania in the platforms of the various parties have said they want.

Civil Service

The proposed civil service act still rests in committee in the House. As at present amended it will apply only to state officers. It provides for a commission, and for extensive machinery to put it into effect. It is doubtful if public sentiment will justify the expenditure involved when only state officers would come under its control, and since all city and county employees are eliminated.

Human Rights Bill

Notable progress was made legislatively towards placing human rights above property rights last week. Practically all the important bills that went through the House are designed to increase the social opportunity, freedom and happiness of the individual.

The following bills were passed: The woman's labor bill, fixing the hours during which women in industry can be employed at nine hours a day and fifty hours a week; this schedule to take effect next year. The child labor act, prohibiting employment of children under the age of fourteen, wiping out all night work for children, and establishing an eight hour day and a maximum of a forty-eight hour week, thus guaranteeing children employed in industry one holiday in seven.

Both bills provide machinery for the protection of these workers and for the enforcement of the laws.

The minimum wage bill authorizes the Governor to appoint a commission of three with power to establish a minimum wage scale for women and children. This minimum amount, it is thought, should insure means for decent living.

The country life bill authorizes the Governor to appoint a commission of seven to devote its time to promoting agricultural education and practical farming.

The Wainwright occupational disease bill provides for the regulation of establishments of a certain class, and for medical examinations and sanitation precautions in industries where occupational diseases are prevalent.

The Shern bill authorizes the appointment of a commission to inquire into the cause and results of industrial accidents and study advanced methods for safe-guarding against such accidents. This measure is a companion piece of legislation to the workmen's compensation and employer's liability act which recently passed the House, and is now in the Senate with the rest of the bills.

Initiative, Referendum and Recall

The Clark bill, providing for a commission form of government for third class cities, having passed the Senate, is still in the House committee. It is an initiative and referendum measure attached. The House last week also passed a bill giving the initiative and referendum to second and third class cities.

There are now on the House calendar two other bills, one giving the initiative and referendum to all cities, boroughs and the state at large. Another bill, while giving the initiative and referendum to all legislative bodies of every kind in the state, has in addition the recall for all state, county, city and borough officers, and the recall of all judges. This is a very sweeping bill, and while there is a possibility of its passing the House it will not likely pass the Senate.

After any Sickness

nothing so rapidly restores health and vigor as SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is the essence of natural body-nourishment, so medically perfect that nature immediately appropriates and distributes it to every organ, every tissue—feeding, nourishing and restoring them to normal activity.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is not a patent medicine, but is nature's body-nourishment with curative, upbuilding properties and without a drop of drug or alcohol. It contains superior cod liver oil, the hypophosphites of lime and soda with glycerine, and is so delicately emulsified that it enters the system without digestive effort—builds, tones and sustains.

After croup, whooping cough, measles and other child ailments it is nature's ally in restoring health.

After grippe or pneumonia it imparts strength and health, and for colds, coughs, sore, tight chests and throat troubles SCOTT'S EMULSION gives the greatest relief known.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Bloomfield, N. J. 12-59

Mothers' Pension

The mothers' pension bill, introduced in the Senate by Mr. Sheatz of Philadelphia, has passed both Houses and is now in the hands of the Governor. It carries an appropriation of $200,000, to be distributed by the several counties among indigent widows for the care of their little children, thus preventing commitment of such children to public institutions.

Liquor Legislation

The Kline bill requires courts to give reasons in cases of refusal of liquor license to houses that have been licensed for two years or more. The idea is that the record thus made can be used as the basis for appeal to the Superior Court. The bill passed the Senate 27 to 12.

Cold Storage

The cold storage bill is now on third reading calendar in the Senate. It has already passed the House, and the chances are good for its passing the Senate and becoming a law. It is a very stringent act, and has been bitterly opposed by many of the special interests of the state.

Good Roads

The $50,000,000 bond issue for good roads will be voted on at the regular election in November. It passed the House with only two dissenting votes. All opposition was removed by the resolution which John R. K. Scott had introduced, asking the Attorney General numerous questions, to which the latter replied stating that it would not be legal to pass enabling legislation giving the Highway Commissioner the right to sell these bonds until the people had approved the loan. This means that the only way Bigelow can get his hands on any of this money is for Governor Tener to call a special session of the Legislature next January, in case the people should approve the bond issue. This extra session is the present plan, for it is generally realized that it would almost break Tener's and Bigelow's hearts if Bigelow should be prevented from getting his fingers on at least a part of this tremendous sum.

The Senate

Although the House refused to give its consent to Senate adjournment, nevertheless the Senate adjourned. There is a constitutional provision that neither body can adjourn for more than three days without the consent of the other, yet on Wednesday noon the Senate adjourned until Monday night. John R. K. Scott of Philadelphia has raised the question that there is a possibility of the actions of the House on last Thursday being illegal, because the Senate adjourned without the House's permission. He has placed the matter before the committee on Judiciary General for a decision. Laws and precedents are being looked up, and there may be an interesting debate on the matter this coming week.

The Legislative Committee appointed by the recent Republican state convention will meet again this Monday, and decide, likely, that drastic action along the line pursued last week will again be attempted by the Senate.

Throttling the People

Senators McNichol, Crow, Beidleman, Snyder, Buckman, Vane, Kline, Hunter and Cooper, with alleged Democrats such as Hall, Herbst, Hoffman, Sones, Fisher and a few others, are the men who are absolutely throttling the demands of the people. They are so tory in their convictions, reactionary and standpoint, that they believe their special duty in the Senate is to kill all progressive legislation.

The notorious Senator Snyder of Schuylkill made a speech recently in which he declared it was the duty of the conservative Senate to stand against the hysteria of the people; that the latter do not know what they are asking for; that the laws they think they want are not the best thing for them. It is really astounding that such reactionary sentiments have any attention whatever at this late day. Every citizen interested in vindication of the platform pledges of all parties should immediately write his State Senator and demand that he support what the platform declared for, and that he vote for these measures which are now being stifled by the Senate. The demand is urgent, and this should be done at once.

HECKERMAN LETTER

P-Nut Salesman Stops in Harrisburg—Hears Former Bedford Pastor.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 20, 1913. I am at the Hershey House. It is owned and run by D. U. Hershey, a prince of good fellows. I do not know how it would be if he did not have a help-mate in the shape of a wife, who looks after every detail in the hotel of fifty rooms. The rooms are small and are as clean as can be. The brass bedsteads serve for mirrors throwing their shadows to all parts of the room while the pillows have feathers in them and not balls of cotton and the bed linen is spotless and as white as is possible to make it.

Mr. Hershey has been seventeen years in this hotel—four years as a clerk for his father and thirteen years as proprietor. He tells me he never saw the keys to the front door. Hershey has a reputation that some are afraid of; that is, he puts so much on the table that the legs are likely to give way and precipitate all on your lap and to the floor. Now when in Harrisburg, take a meal at the Hershey House and tell your friends about it, it is all that Dad asks to prove his assertions.

My, how cold it is here today and my overcoat is in Bedford. The only place in which I have been comfortable today was the Salem Reformed Church, where Rev. Dr. Kreemer is pastor. The sermon this morning was very interesting. The text was from St. John, "And yet a little while." The free prayers were so much more interesting to me than the same read Sunday after Sunday. Dr. Kreemer is not well. I noticed that he grasped the arm of the chair in the chance for support, also at times held to the side of the pulpit. Most of your readers will remember him as a former pastor of the Bedford Reformed Church. May he live to be a hundred and enjoy every day of it.

George Harry, a Bedford boy, has the finest cigar store in the state. The room is not large but the furnishings cost more than the price of a box of Alex. DeBauhaug's half Spanish. George recently had his lease renewed for ten years at twenty-two hundred per year. He has been in the room he now occupies for fifteen years and during this time his two boys and daughter have grown from wee tots to be stars in the firmament of Harrisburg's best people. His oldest son is confidential clerk to Governor Tener.

I have tried to see Sam Sansom but so far have not done so. George Harry tells me that Pitt Street, from end to end, will soon be paved. I don't know his author unless it is Governor Tener, whom he says was in Bedford for dinner and who kicked about it, saying it was not half so good as the meals at Eichelberger's in Everett.

Another bit of news was that Fred Metzger and some friends of Pittsburgh were negotiating for the Russell corner, where they propose erecting a first class hotel with 18 or 20 bath rooms and that the rates will be $2.50 to $3.50 per day. Go in gentlemen and may you be eminently successful is the sincere wish of Dad. Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

The Fire Department of Paris

The work of the fire department of Paris is shown in thirteen illustrations published in the May Popular Mechanics Magazine. Much of the efficiency of the Parisian force is due to drills in which various appliances are used daily until the firemen become thoroughly proficient. Drill towers, with balconies and projections similar to the six-story apartment buildings of the city, are used with scaling ladders, etc., and these appliances are also employed for drilling with extension ladders and rescue of human beings by life lines.

The courtyards of some of the fire stations have fireplaces with tall chimneys for practice in putting out chimney fires. Demonstrations are given with a device by which obstructions or disabled horses can be raised and removed from the streets. The same device is also used on dangerous buildings, or in any place where the firemen are required to lift heavy weights.

A Punster Punished

By F. A. MITCHEL

There are misfortunes and misfortunes. It is a misfortune to be dumped into an ocean from a steamer leaving you at the rate of twenty knots an hour, but you are very soon either saved or your troubles are ended. I suffer under a misfortune that began with my birth, was added to at my baptism and has been endured ever since. My father's name was John Darling. If he had named me John for himself one-half my life's sufferings would have been avoided, but my mother's family name was Rosedale and I was given that surname. I presume I should remember my parents with reverence and affection. As to the latter, so I do, but how can I revere a pair of intellects which even combined were too stupid not to fore see that I, as boy and man, would be Rose Darling?

The trouble began when I first went to school, the boys suggesting that I be classed with the girls. When I grew older and joined a musical club I was asked if I sang soprano or contralto. I was called Rosie Dear, Darling Rose—indeed, every play upon my name that could be invented.

Foreseeing that a manly part in life was needed to help me to throw off this suggestion of effeminacy, I determined to become a soldier. I applied to the congressmen of my district. He told me that he had given out his appointments, but I saw from the amused expression on his face that he would not think of recommending a boy with such a name. I walked away to the nearest recruiting station and enlisted.

I knew what I had to expect from my comrades, and I was not disappointed. I was soon given the sobriquet or "Sweetheart" and, except officially, was never called anything else. I bore it stoically. When addressed as "Sweetheart" or "Rosie Dear" I did not complain, taking it as a matter of course—that is, pretending to do so, though every time I was thus addressed it was like a stab.

I resolved to be the best soldier in my company, and I was. Notwithstanding my incubus I was promoted to be corporal, then sergeant and finally orderly sergeant. When I reached the highest noncommissioned office in my company I secured an advantage. It enabled me when on duty to compel the men to address me by my right name. I permitted them to call me what they liked unofficially, but the moment one of them did so upon any official occasion I brought him up with a round turn. This gradually killed the habit.

My service in the ranks was during the last Indian troubles and in a fight that occurred in attempting to drive a tribe of Redskins back on to their reservation I preferring to die rather than gain something by which to balance the disadvantage of the name under which I lived, fought regardless of danger. The result was that when we got back to the fort the colonel commanding sent for me, complimented me and told me that he had recommended me for a commission. He knew me as Sergeant Darling. Darling by itself is not a very bad name, and I hoped that when I came to associate with the commissioned officers I should gain a respite. I would be Mr. Darling, and when I came to the next grade above I would be Captain Darling. Then, I would get rid of the "Rosie Dear" and all that.

But I was doomed to disappointment. I found that the higher I rose the more ambitious were my associates. Ambition takes many forms. The ambition of the stupidest persons seems to be to crack a joke. And the stupider the person the more reliant he is upon an opportunity. When a few weeks later the colonel sent for me to hand me my commission I found him looking at the parchment with a smile hovering about his lips. With a twinkle in his eye he said half musingly,

"Rosedale Darling, Rose Darling, Ha ha! Mr. Rose Darling, I am pleased to greet you among the commissioned officers of the army. I dare say you will be very dear to the ladies of the garrison."

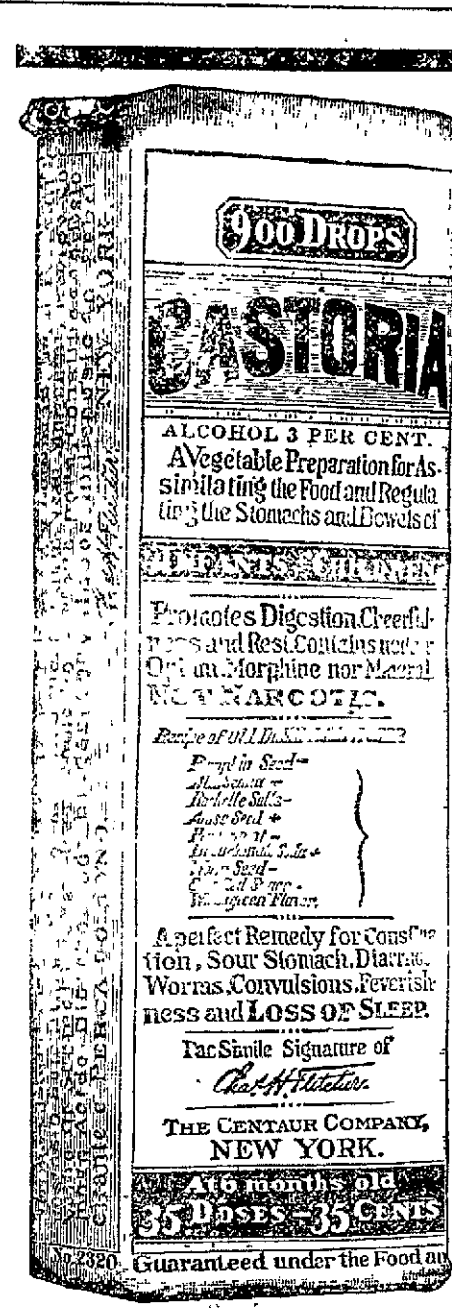

"Thank you, colonel," I said, forcing a smile. "That's a very good pun of yours. How did you happen to think of it?"

"Oh, it's in the name—Rose Darling, Darling Rose, Rose Dear, see?"

"Upon my word," I replied, my mind fighting up with assumed surprise and admiration. "Excellent! I wonder no one ever thought of it before."

"Haven't they?" His own face reflecting the pleasure in mine. "Well, I suppose it's my sense of humor."

Then and there I resolved that I would make a bold stroke for revenge upon him for indulging in that humor. I had often seen a pretty girl of seventeen at guard mounting or dress parade whom I had been told was the colonel's daughter. I laid siege to her heart and after a struggle won her though the colonel tried to head me off by trumping up charges against me. I was tried and acquitted, and I married the girl. Since then every time a Darling child is born to me I feel that I am giving my humorous father-in-law a new stab. I have at times been tempted to say an incubus on one of my own boys by naming him for myself in order to be able to gloat the more over the old fool who thought he was the first man to pun on my name.

The Ladies' World

In The Ladies' World for May one story stands out from all the rest because of the strong human appeal of its subject and the excellent treatment. It is called The Years Between, and the author is Prudence Poole, a name new to magazine readers, but one which, judging by this story, should be met frequently hereafter. The theme is the marriage of a man with a woman ten years his senior, and the efforts of the wife to overcome this difference. She succeeds at a cost, and a crisis is inevitable, when the hand of Fate tears aside all artificialities. Leonard Merrick has also a good story in The Reformation of Billy Jones, a stage-struck young man who found his life's work in business after a few tempestuous years.

There is another installment of Mrs. Williamson's serial, The Girl

Who Had Nothing, and two human documents of unusual interest, Why I Am Proud of My Wife, and An Ugly Woman's Ambition. One of the fashionable dancers of the day, Mlle. Neysa, describes her art entertainingly in The Soul of the Dance. The practical part of this magazine is always worth while, because the information, whether household or personal, can be relied on. FRIDAY MORNING, APR. 25, 1913.

CLEAN-UP DAY

It is time that the date for a clean-up day be fixed which should mark the end, however, of the work of making Bedford more beautiful and more sanitary. Every citizen should see to it that his own premises are cleared of all rubbish. The little fire at a safe place will do much to help get rid of much of the undesirable material in the gardens.

The old cans and articles of that nature which cannot be gotten rid of in any other way should be gathered together and placed in a convenient place so that when the wagons make the rounds on the "clean-up" day they may easily be loaded.

Don't wait; go to work now.

ERECT THE FOUNTAIN

The local Humane Society is to be congratulated upon the movement to place a fountain on the Public Square. The need of such a fountain has long been felt and its erection now seems assured, and a nice one at that.

As stated in The Gazette two weeks ago a check for One Hundred Dollars was received by us from a son of the old town, Elie Sheetz, the famous candy manufacturer of Washington, D. C., which is to be added to the Two Hundred Fifty Dollars to be raised here, for the purpose of securing a better and more beautiful fountain.

At this fountain residents and visitors may take "a rill from the town pump" and horses and other animals may quench their thirst. It is a good move and should be given a boost. One way to help it along is to attend the concert tomorrow night in Assembly Hall by the Juniata College Glee Club. Turn out!

A Correction

Osterburg, Pa., April 24, 1913.
Editor Gazette:

Concerning the article in the Point letter in your paper last week regarding those horses of Michael Miller's, I wish to say that I never was at Mr. Miller's with a man by the name of Detwiler. I did, as a liveryman, take Dr. Garman to Mr. Miller's and left him there.

J. S. Bowser.

Another Tragedy

Springhope, April 21, 1913.

About five and one-half years ago M. S. Miller of Point bought a mare from John Bender of Osterburg, which seemed to have something wrong in the head. Bender said it was a cold, so Miller bought her for $140 and brought her to a veterinarian and he said it was a cold or might be catarrh, but he said he could not cure catarrh; he took her to another veterinarian and he said it was nasal catarrh, so Miller wrote the symptoms and conditions to Dr. Hess of Ohio and he called it nasal catarrh. But the mare worked all right and ate and bred and raised him two fine colts.

On February 15 Mr. Miller took her to Bedford to Stiver's horse sale and she was sold for $40 to Howard Mock, who took her to Lovely and sent for a veterinarian and he called it glanders and had her killed and burned. Then R. A. Garman of Martinsburg came to Mr. Miller's and found a fine team of her colts, one five and the other three, which he said looked all right and worked among autos and engines, were gentle and nothing could be seen wrong with them in any way. Mr. Garman took some blood from them and put some stuff in their eyes and took their temperature and sent it to the state laboratory at Philadelphia and quarantined Miller's team from the road, allowing him to plow and work as usual on the farm. Miller worked them and they ran and played every chance they got and were all right as far as anything could be seen. Mr. Garman returned and took them from Miller, killed them and had them burned, stating they had glanders. He appraised them, allowing Miller only $60 apiece and said he did not know when Miller would get his money as the state was out of money.

Mr. Garman seems to have it in his own hands as he appraised Mock's mare at $30 and advised Miller to give back $20 of the $40 that Mock had paid, which he did, giving Mock $10 to put in his purse, all clear money.

Miller could have had $375 for his team, and if he gets $120 he will be out $255 instead of $10 in pocket. Now if this is the judgment used no wonder the state is out of money, and soon the farmers will all be out of money.

Farmers, we must wake up and arise to the sense of duty or we will have to free old America again!

I have doctoring horses for forty-five years and have seen several such cases and it was always cold or catarrh; I never knew of any dying, all had to be killed. If this is glanders why did not others take it, as she has been in several stables, thinking it was only catarrh and not contagious? I am as much afraid of glanders as any man and will take every precaution against it possible. When you get glanders in your stable you will know it; you won't need to guess at it. Miller is a man of moderate means and this loss lets him in bad shape, all for the money-makers that take advantage of the corrupt laws that are made nowadays.

George M. Smith.

Mad at Paint

25c a gallon for paint is about $2.50 on the average job, and lots of men waited last year for that; but they didn't reckon; they got mad; wouldn't pay it.

There are times to get mad and refuse to pay; but when one's property needs protecting is no time to get mad and not paint.

Besides, it costs more to get mad and wait than to paint.

Getting mad doesn't do any good to your property; paint does it good by keeping out water; no water no paint, some water and rot, and a little rot is more than enough to make a man liberal toward his painter and paint.

Paint costs not a cent. All the paint in the world, so long as it keeps out water, costs not a cent.

Lesson IV.—Second Quarter, For April 27, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xlvii, 23-36.

Memory Verse, 26, 27—Golden Text, 1 Cor. xiii, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Staarna.

We begin today some studies in the life of Joseph, who was in many respects a most wonderful type of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Spirit has told us by Paul that Adam and Eve suggest Christ and the church both by analogy and contrast.

We have seen much in the death and resurrection and marriage of Isaac, but no character is quite so full typically as that of Joseph. No one can be a type of Christ in the matter of being sinless, for He alone was without sin. But there are quite a number who because of incidents in their lives or official position are suggestive of Christ.

We are to have seven studies in the history of Joseph, and as the next will be in chapter xi this lesson must touch xxxix as well as xxxvii. We are introduced to Joseph at the age of seventeen as a shepherd with his brethren (verse 2). There were two peculiar things about him, for neither of which he was responsible—he was loved by Israel more than the others because he was the son of his old age, and the Lord gave him two dreams which indicated an exaltation above his brethren and even above his parents (verses 3-11).

Because of his father's love and these dreams it is written that his brethren hated him and they hated him yet the more and they envied him and as they saw him coming, being sent by his father to seek their welfare, they conspired against him to slay him (verses 4, 5, 8, 11, 18, 20).

Our lesson verses today tell of his being stripped of his coat of many colors or pieces, cast into a pit, taken up again and sold as a slave for twenty pieces of silver and taken down to Egypt and sold to Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's and captain of the guard. As his father waited and wondered concerning his precious boy they brought home his coat, which they had dipped in the blood of a kid of the goats, and said, "This have we found—know now whether it be thy son's coat or no." So Jacob was led to suppose that Joseph had been killed by a wild beast, and he refused to be comforted. He had sorely deceived his father, and having sown the wind he reaped the whirlwind.

Turning to Joseph, we find him both as a slave and as a prisoner—fairly accused and wrongfully imprisoned—called a prosperous man, for the Lord was with him. In Potiphar's house all that he had was put in Joseph's hand, and even in the prison the keeper put everything under his care, and whatever they did there he was the doer of it (xxxix, 1-6; 21-23). So the years passed with Joseph, who was sold for a servant, whose feet they hurt with fetters. He was laid in iron. Until the time that his word came the word of the Lord tried him (Ps. cv, 17-19).

In "The Study of the Types," by Miss Ada R. Habershon, she notes the following points of analogy, giving the New Testament and other references. I am glad to quote them for those who are interested enough to look up the references, giving today only those from the two chapters we have looked at.

The good shepherd feeding his flock (John x, 11, 14). Loved by His Father (Matt. iii, 17). Hated, envied and disbelieved by his brethren (John iii, 19, 20; vii, 5; xv, 25; Mark xv, 10; Luke xix, 14). His pre-eminence shown in his dreams (Col. i, 18). His father observed his saying (Luke ii, 51). He willingly agreed to go to his brethren (Ps. xl, 7, 8; Luke xx, 13; John iii, 16). He went from Hebron (fellowship), came to Shechem and was found wandering in the field (John xvi, 28; xvii, 5, 24; iv, 4, 5; Matt. xiii, 33; Luke ix, 58). He went after his brethren to seek their welfare, and his father told him to bring him word again (Luke xix, 10; xv, 4; John xvii, 13). They conspired against him, mocked him, stripped him, put him in a pit, sat down and afterward sold him into Egypt for twenty pieces of silver (Matt. xxvii, 1, 28, 36, 9; xvi, 15; ii, 14; Mark xv, 32; Ps. xl, 2; lxxix, 2, 14, 15).

He became slave to an officer of Pharaoh, but the Lord was with him and made all that he did to prosper (Isa. xlii, 7; iii, 10; Phil. ii, 7; John xvi, 32). Those who oppressed him were blessed for his sake and placed everything under his care (Eph. i, 3; iv, 32; John iii, 35; 11 Tim. i, 12). He was a goodly person, well favored, yet without sin (Song v, 16; Luke ii, 52; Hab. iv, 15). Many other texts may be added to these, and we will quote further analogies from Miss Halter's studies in future lessons.

It will help some to remember that "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope," and that "These things were our examples and happened unto them, for types" (Rom. xv, 4; 1 Cor. x, 6, 11 margin). I have no doubt but that Joseph was sustained in his sufferings by the glory set before him in his dreams, for since he could interpret the dreams of others, as we shall see in our next lesson, he must have understood something of the significance of his own. It is true of every redeemed soul, as it was true of Joseph, that every step in the way of humiliation is a step toward a throne and a kingdom.

LADY MARY'S DIET.

It Was Entirely Too Dainty to Suit Her Italian Doctor.

That recipe of the tallest Scotsman in London—two meals a day and live forever—would not have appealed to the Englishman of the eighteenth century nor yet to the man who lived abroad. Here, for instance, are a few tridles which Lady Mary Montagu managed to exist on in Italy:

"I wake about 7 and drink half a pint of warm asses' milk," she wrote, "after which I sleep two hours. Then come three large cups of milk coffee and two hours after a large cup of milk chocolate. Two hours later my dinner, where I never fail to swallow a good dish (I don't mean plate) of gravy soup, with all the bread, roots, etc., belonging to it. I then eat the wing and the whole body of a large fat capon and a veal sweetbread, concluding with a competent quantity of custard and some roasted chestnuts."

Even then the day was not done. Lady Mary goes on: "At 5 in the afternoon I take another dose of asses' milk and for supper twelve chestnuts, one new laid egg and a handsome porridge of white milk." In these degenerate days it would be thought that the patient had done very well.

The eighteenth century Italian was not so easily satisfied. The parish doctor marveled how Lady Mary managed to survive with such a flinching appetite.—London Chronicle

THE COUNTRY LAWYER.

A Legal View of Him as the Slave of His Clients.

"A professional baseball player in part bases his claim for a large compensation upon the theory that in accepting service he surrenders in a great measure his liberty and becomes the property of his employer," writes Almond G. Shepard in "Case and Comment."

"If this was the basis of compensation for the lawyer in the rural districts he would speedily become a millionaire. For he is the property not only of one individual, but frequently of a whole community, and the greater his success, the wider his reputation, the more abject is his slavery. His clients are tyrannical. They know and recognize no office hours. The month band on a farm has at least a few hours between late dusk and early dawn for repose, but even these are frequently denied the country lawyer."

"Some of his clients are prone to consult him at his residence late at night, when none of the curious minded villagers can see them, and speculate and gossip on the question and of the nature and purpose of the call. Another class, believing in the adage that the early bird catches the worm, at early sunrise interrupts his slumbers to make sure that they retained the 'best' lawyer in the county to represent them in some present or expected trouble."

Gallant Unto Death.

When Sir Ralph Abercromby was mortally wounded in the battle of Aboukir he was carried on a litter on board the Foudroyant. To ease his pain a soldier's blanket was placed under his head. He asked what it was.

"It is only a soldier's blanket," he was told.

"Whose blanket is it?" he persisted, lifting himself up.

"Only one of the men's."

"I want to know the name of the man whose blanket this is," the dying commander insisted.

"It is Duncan Roy's of the Forty-second, Sir Ralph," said his attendant at last.

"Then see that Duncan Roy gets his blanket this very night," commanded the brave man, who did not forget even in his last agonies the comfort and welfare of his men. Of such unselfish stuff are true soldiers made.—Youth's Companion.

Black Opals.

Black opals seem almost misnomers, for while some of the stones are actually black and all of them have a dark body or underground they are really wonderful, flashing, changing masses of color. All the colors of the solar spectrum vibrate through them, some in small pinpoint markings, others in barlequin, peacock and formal designs. Some of them show broad flashes of red, blue, green or purple, which change rapidly from one to another on the slightest change of angle or light. Others exhibit cloud effects and sunsets such as Turner painted and only Ruskin could describe.

A Rare Film.

"Madam, I understand that your daughter helps you daily with your housework."

"It is true."

"What royalties would you charge me for a moving picture reel of this most unusual sight?"—Cincinnati Times-Star

The Helpful Man.

Any man who, by sound thinking and hard work, develops and carries on a productive industry and by his good judgment makes that industry both profitable and stable confers an immense benefit on society.—Charles W. Elliot.

He Told Her.

She—I wish I knew how I could make you extremely happy, dear Karl. He—Well, write to your father and ask him to double your dowry.—Mex gendorfer Blatter.

An Old Joke Retold.

Friend—The public will miss you now you have left the stage. Actor—That's why I left. I dislike being hit.—London Standard.

And There You Are

A psychologist came upon a hard-working Irishman toiling, bareheaded, in the street.

"Don't you know," said the psychologist, "that to work in the hot sun without a hat is bad for your brains?"

"D'ye think," asked the Irishman, "that O'd be on this job if Oi had any brains?"

Just a Slight One

"The notion that I am to marry a rich and handsome man haunts me." "Possibly because it is the ghost of a chance."

Do Not Plant Diseased Trees

State Zoologist H. A. Surface calls attention to the timely topic of Crown Gall of fruit trees, saying: "As the season for planting is near at hand, it is very important for planters to know the visible evidences of Crown Gall, in order that they may be able to detect it for themselves and understand its final effects and in order that they may be careful to avoid planting trees infected with it."

This disease is produced by a germ which causes hairy or knotty growths upon the roots, and is one of the most serious troubles that many nursery-men have to contend against and the tree planters must watch. It is to be recognized by the presence of abnormal fine roots, or by knots or swelling on the roots, which may or may not be covered with these tufts of fine hairy roots. Unfortunately, some nurserymen make a practice of cutting off these galls with a knife. This helps to deceive the grower who does not make careful inspection of his trees, but the man who inspects them with care certainly can detect the fact that the galls have been cut away and is justified in throwing them out, as it is impossible, in most cases to cut them off so that they will not come again. It must be remembered that the Crown Galls of a tree is very closely comparable with the cancer of the human system.

Prof. Gillette, the State Entomologist of Colorado, in a very recent publication on this important subject, says: "In some cases almost entire orchards have been infested with Crown Gall to such an extent that the trees were not only stunted, but practically worthless as commercial producers. A certain block of peach trees containing several acres was pulled and destroyed because of the fact that practically every tree was stunted by Crown Gall. There is no cure for this ailment. Consequently, in assessing this profit he includes the tariff in the value of the commodity. Thus the people pay not only the tariff but also pay profit on the tariff. Every dollar of increased price for the raw material assessed by the tariff becomes five or six dollars by the time it reaches the consumer.

Representative Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, the member of the Ways and Means Committee who drew the income tax provision, prophetically sees the day when all government revenue will be derived from just two principal forms of direct taxation—the income tax and the inheritance tax.

"The rates in the pending bill are but tentative," he said. "They can and will be changed by succeeding congresses."

"The measure is designed to fit in with the budget system of estimating government expenses. The day will come when government expenses will be appropriated for in an annual budget bill. On the basis of this the amount of revenue needed by the government for the succeeding year will be estimated. In order to raise just the revenue needed, Congress will set the income tax rates to fit the case. There will be few customs duties. There will be, however, an inheritance tax to relieve some of the tax burden on incomes."

The estimates of the Ways and Means Committee show vividly how wealth has concentrated in this country. Although incomes of as low as $4,000 per year will be subject to taxation, yet less than one per cent of our total population is affected by the bill.

Do Not Spray Blossoms

At this time of the year Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pennsylvania, President of the State Beekeepers' Association, and Vice President of the National B. K. A., issues an important and timely warning against spraying trees or plants while in bloom. He says, "It is surprising that there are a few persons who yet speak of 'spraying blossoms' or spraying trees while in bloom. This is a practice that cannot be too strongly condemned. No one should at any time spray trees or plants while in bloom, especially if they expect to produce a crop by so doing."

"Spraying while in bloom not only kills the bees and other insects that are necessary to carry pollen from flower to flower, and thus insures the setting of the fruit, but it is also liable to injure directly the young and delicate fruit itself, and thus result in lessening the crop. Not only this, but it has been proven that effective and satisfactory results in the control of pests cannot be obtained by spraying while in bloom for two reasons: (1) There are no pests that must be treated by spraying at this time; (2) the stamens or threadlike organs in the flower fill the calyx cup to such an extent while in bloom, that the poison does not readily enter the cup, and the codling moth, which later enters the fruit at this place, is not controlled or destroyed so surely as though the spraying were done after the blossoms have withered or fallen."

"The chief pest for which spraying is done shortly after blooming is the codling moth, which makes the wormy pome fruits, or apples, pears and quinces. For this two pounds of arsenate of lead should be used in each fifty gallons of liquid, whether this be water, or bordeaux mixture, or the extra-dilute lime sulphur solution. To avoid killing the bees, as well as to avoid injury to the blossoms by the action of the spray liquid, and insure the penetration of the liquid to the place where it is needed, the spraying should be done only after the blossoms fall. To insure greater efficiency it should be repeated in about a month after the first application.

"We are coming to recognize more and more the importance of the Honey-bee, not only as a producer of a most delicious and healthful food for mankind, but as an essential agency to profitable fruit-growing. Our most extensive and successful orchardists make every effort to keep bees in or near the orchards. There are many kinds of fruit that would not be fructified or fertilized, if they were not planted near other varieties, and if some agency were not effective in carrying the pollen from one to the other. It has been proven that large blocks of almost any kind of fruit are nearly as productive as are those planted in strips of a few rows each, alternated with other varieties."

"This shows the necessity of mankind co-operating with Nature in providing for the transferring of pollen or flower dust from one blossom to another. It is a very thoughtful person who would spray while in bloom, and thus destroy the most useful adjunct to fruit growing, viz. the bees, in insuring this natural, and necessary transmission of pollen."

"Fortunately, recent definite legislation in Pennsylvania is provided against the practice of spraying while in bloom."

Friendly Hint

"I'm afraid to say exactly what I think," said Governor Bluff. "That's interesting," replied Senator Sorghum. "But a man who adopts that principle ought to be more careful what he thinks."

SCANDALS UNEARTHED

By Alert Democrats in House of Representatives

TAXPAYERS OF THE STATE

Have Learned a Lot About the Expenditure of the People's Funds for Political Machine.

Harrisburg, April 21.—Thanks to a militant and alert Democratic minority in the House of Representatives, the citizens and taxpayers of the State of Pennsylvania have learned a lot about the expenditure of the people's fund for the maintenance of a discredited political machine, since the present legislature began its session.

Not content with asking embarrassing questions of State officials, the Democrats have insisted upon the investigation of departmental extravagance and inefficiency, and have pointed out ways and means of eliminating graft, pruning padded payrolls and improving the public service, while at the same time reducing the cost of government. Their work has been constructive as well as inquisitorial, and with the support of independents of other parties they will, before the session concludes, have passed legislation that will result in the saving of many thousands of dollars to the taxpayers.

This work has not been accomplished without the bitter opposition of the Machine. It is something new that a standard of efficiency and economy such as would be demanded in any large business concern should be advocated in the business of government, and the Democrats and independents who have fought for honest service and an honest payroll in the State government are not popular with the statesmen-for-revenue-only who have always looked upon the public treasury as a bank for the payment of political debts, and have been liberal with their drafts thereon.

Graft-Tainted Atmosphere
The political atmosphere on Capitol Hill has been tainted with graft for so many years it is not surprising that some State employees regard the diversion of money that should go to the State treasury into their own pockets as a perfectly legitimate source of addition to the fat salaries allowed them for little real work. It was lately revealed that the chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State government, to whom under the law all births and deaths must be reported, at a large expense to the State, has been annually reaping a profit of about $3,500 by the sale of the same statistics to the federal government. This official receives a salary of $2,500 from the State, as chief of the bureau of vital statistics and an extra $1,000, also from the State for his services in the Marriage Bureau. Inadequacy of compensation can hardly be put forth as an excuse for his peddling the information collected by the State and pocketing the proceeds.

This is believed to be only one of many instances of graft in the various State departments, all of which will be cut off if a bill introduced by Democratic Floor Leader E. Lowry Humes becomes a law. The Humes bill provides that all fees received by any State employee for the use or sale of statistics, reports, documents or information which came to him in his official capacity must be turned into the State treasury.

Many Scandals Unearthed
The Democrats began the work of unearthing scandalous mismanagement, waste of public funds, petty graft and graft not so petty, early in the session. One of the first revelations, and one which aroused the Governor's ire, was that of the expenditure of $11,000 for a cross-country junket by Governor Tener and a merry party of political friends for the ostensible purpose of choosing a site for the Pennsylvania building at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

DON'T MISTAKE THE CAUSE

Many Bedford People Have Kidney Trouble And Do Not Know It.

Highly colored; contain sediment? Likely your kidneys are at fault. Weak kidneys give warnings of distress.

Heed the warning; don't delay—Use a tested kidney remedy. Read this Hyndman testimony: John A. Topper, Clarence St., Hyndman, Pa., says: "Some years ago, when I was suffering from disordered kidneys, I took Doan's Kidney Pills and they brought me great relief from the aches and pains. At that time one of my family told of my experience in a public endorsement and I now confirm all she then said about Doan's Kidney Pills. They are certainly a good kidney medicine."

ing a site for the Pennsylvania building at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The Governor's party made the trip in an elaborate train of private cars, the larder and ice boxes bulging with the best to eat, drink and smoke. The party numbered, at various stages of the journey, from thirty to fifty, and all expenses were paid by the State Treasury. No other "business" was transacted except the selection of a piece of ground upon which to construct a building for this State's exhibit at the exposition.

Another Democratic demand for information brought forth, with much grumbling and little grace, the first definite and detailed statement since 1909 of the doings and expenditures of the State Highway department. The report reveals that the State has been paying at the rate of $20,000 a mile for the construction of State highways under the Sprout Act, and that at the same rate of expenditure it will cost nearly $200,000,000 instead of the $50,000,000 to be provided by the proposed bond issue, to complete the 3,000-odd miles of roadways contemplated by this act.

Purging the Payrolls
The Geiser Committee and the Humes Committee, both appointed upon Democratic initiative and headed by Democratic chairmen, have revealed a scandalous state of affairs in the public pay rolls. The Geiser Committee's investigation of dual office holders provoked a set-to between the House and the Executive department, from which Governor Tener was glad to retire with as little humiliation as possible when he found that the House would not permit itself to be bulldozed into repudiating the action of its committee in subpoenaing executive department employees to testify Governor Tener's private secretary, Walter Gaither, stands foremost among the dual office holders revealed by the committee's activities. There are scores of other Machine favorites holding two offices each and performing little service for the double salaries they receive.

If the recommendations of the Humes Committee are enacted into law the State will be saved not less than $40,000 each session and the efficiency of House and Senate employees will be greatly increased, this committee found men on the State payroll at $7 a day who perform absolutely no service, their employment being merely payment out of the State treasury for political service rendered the Machine. Other men were found drawing $6 a day, Sundays and holidays included, for the arduous task of unlocking a door in the morning, when a committee room was required, and locking it again in the evening. A system of farming out jobs was revealed, whereby the holder of a place on the State payroll comes to the capitol but once a month, to draw his pay and settle with his substitutes the latter getting anywhere from one-third to one-sixth of the amount paid by the State, and the balance going into the pocket of the political contractor. Instances were found where appointees had remained at home continuously without even hiring a substitute, their "duties" being such as to make their absence unnoted. In a very few cases departments were found insufficiently manned and their employees over-worked while other State employees, drawing the same salaries, had little or nothing to do. If the recommendations of the Humes Committee are heeded, the entire system of the House and Senate employment will be revolutionized, sinecures and graft eliminated, efficiency secured and at least $40,000 a session saved to the State treasury.

One of the most glaring examples of graft, which the committee recommends the elimination of by specific legislation, is the doubling of the payroll the first two weeks of each legislative session. It has been the custom, upheld by two successive Republican Attorney Generals, to pay two sets of employees for the interval between the convening of the Legislature for organization and its reconvening after a recess of ten days or two weeks. New employees, under this system, receive pay for ten days or two weeks prior to their appointment.

Subsidizing the Press
One of the most startling revelations which came as a result of a Democratic demand for information as to public expenditures was that of the systematic use of public funds by Machine officials to curry favor with the press. Wherever in this State a newspaper could be found willing to "go along with" the Gang or to shut its eyes to the worst features of the corrupt political system, that newspaper could depend upon liberal State patronage. Advertising of constitutional amendments was a favorite method of rewarding subservient journals. The character, circulation or influence of a newspaper counted for nothing in the awarding of Machine favors. The money was placed where it would do the most good for the Gang, and the little village newspaper of a few hundred circulation frequently received as much money for the publication of State advertising as the largest newspapers of the State charged for the same service.

All that was necessary for any newspaper publisher to dip his hand into the public treasury, under this system, was to be "on good" according to the Machine point of view, which, of course, means "be bad" from the viewpoint of the public welfare. Very few newspapers honestly devoted the best interest of the State or vigorously antagonistic to Gang control ever got much of this "easy money." In the neighborhood of $275,000 is the amount reported by Secretary of the Commonwealth Robert McAfee as charged by the various newspapers for publication of the constitutional amendments voted on last November. As high as $1800 was charged the State by several small papers for the advertising—a larger amount in some instances than their total advertising revenue from all other sources would amount to in a year.

Perhaps the difference of the voting public to the outrage of Machine government in past years may be traced in a large measure to this systematic corruption of the press. Honest newspapers, unsusceptible to the influence of the Gang, have found it hard to thrive and the public has been all-informed of political conditions in this State. The temptation of the small newspapers to "be good" to the powers that dispense important advertising patronages, in order that they might participate and prosper, has been intense and constant. All honor to those self-respecting, honorable and plucky men of the country press who have steadfastly refused to sell their independence for a mess of constitutional amendment advertising, and through whom the people of Pennsylvania are now learning the truth of political conditions in this Commonwealth.

When my Ford car wears out, I want another of same make. The first year it went 6,000 miles, last year 9,000 and so far this winter has gone 1,000, being on road every month of winter, making 16,000 miles in all. I have used only three sets of tire in running this distance. I thought, judging from other cars, that I would need another car this spring but this one is running good and strong. It has many thousand miles in it yet, and is good for the season.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Excellent Program Rendered by Hyndman Graduates.

The class of 1913 of the Hyndman High School assembled in the Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening for the baccalaureate sermon which was delivered by Rev. Stiles. The text was found in II Timothy, 3rd chapter, 17th verse. The sermon was very ably given, setting forth some very excellent ideas. The path to be trodden by the class was given a very prominent place in the discourse, giving examples of conditions that may be of great use to them as they travel over the journey of life. The regular services in the Reformed and Evangelical Churches were abandoned for that evening, and the ministers of these denominations were present. The large auditorium was full. The music was very good.

The commencement exercises were held in Mullin's Hall Tuesday evening, April 22. The following program was rendered: Music by orchestra which was under the direction of J. A. Gaster; invocation by Rev. D. N. Dittmar; Ida Mitchell delivered an oration, the subject of the theme being, "The Winning Quality." It was exceptionally well prepared and given. The Class History was given by Ruth Pierson. It showed that much time and thought had been put on its preparation. Advice to the Juniors by Digory Noel gave some excellent advice to the class of 1914. The class poem was then given by Pauline Gaster, which showed painstaking in its preparation. The poem was full of humor; and was delivered in such a way that it showed unusual ability. The orchestra then gave a selection followed by the Class Prophecy by Ethel Hillegass. This showed to the audience the future of each of the members of her class. The Presentation was given by Blanche Rush. She donated an appropriate present to each of the class. An oration was then delivered by Lillian Reese, the theme being the class motto: "Tonight We Launch, When Shall We Anchor?" This showed that they were not through, but just starting on life's journey. It was well rendered. The Class Will was given by Leslie Blair, which willed away all the property of the class to different members of the school.

The special feature of the evening was an address given by Dr. George P. Bible of the National School of Oratory of Philadelphia. He spoke for about one hour and fifteen minutes, during which time he not only entertained but instructed the entire audience. He spoke of the value of a good educational training for the youth of our land. The home and school training of the youth was discussed, as was also the great and filthy habit of smoking cigarettes. The great strides of civilization were spoken of, thus showing that the child needed more training than its parents. His entire lecture was one that was full of good and practical suggestions for each and every one present. Dr. Bible seems to have the gift of entertaining while he is instructing as well. The address took well and all were sorry when he finished, which is a sure sign of the qualities of a public speaker. At the end of his address he presented the diplomas to the graduating class.

The benediction was given by Rev. Stiles. The last number of the program being a selection from the orchestra.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Important Subjects Discussed at Meeting Last Thursday.

The twelfth Sunday School Convention of the Ninth District of Bedford County was held in the Baptist Church at Springhope on Thursday, April 17. The program prepared by the committee in charge showed marked ability and, if each speaker had been present, it would, without a doubt, been the best convention held in this district, as a very profitable and enjoyable day was the decision of a number of persons who attended.

The convention opened with devotional services by the president, Robert C. Smith. The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Robert Wilcox, a former resident, in a very able manner. Rev. Levi Rodgers responded in a few well chosen remarks in which he assured the people of Springhope that the members of the convention had gladly received the invitation and he felt that they were welcome.

The enrollment of delegates and superintendents showed that out of nineteen schools only one superintendent answered to his name, and about half the schools were represented by delegates. The question arises in our minds, why is this? Is it negligence of the individual or is there not enough interest taken in Sunday School work? This certainly is an undesirable report of the superintendents of this district as well as schools who failed to send delegates.

The Real Pleasure of Sunday School Work was discussed by W. S. Lysinger of Bedford. He attributed the real pleasure to that of doing somebody else good, if we can in our weak way, bring some one else from darkness into the light. It certainly brings real pleasure to us in the work. Mr. Gibson, Revs. Zehring and Rodgers also spoke on this topic.

Rev. Rodgers opened the subject The Attitude of the Church to the Sunday School. The Sunday School is no longer called the nursery of the church, but a part of the church.

The Benefits of Good Organization was thoroughly discussed by Rev. Zehring. He spoke of how business affairs were organized and showed the importance of having good teachers and officers and how, by organizing, so many individuals could be interested in the different phases connected with Sunday School work.

The Advantage of the Cradle Roll was very well presented in a carefully prepared paper by Mrs. E. L. Smith, the only superintendent present. This topic was thoroughly discussed and many valuable points brought out.

The topic, How Choose Teachers was taken up by Mr. Gibson and very well considered. Each superintendent should know the school well enough to select competent teachers. The different grades of classes need different types of teachers. Teachers should be selected, as our day school teachers are, persons with the ability to teach. The teacher should have a standard and that should be perfection.

Rev. Hermann spoke at length on Mission Study in the Sunday School. He advanced the idea that certain Sundays be set apart by each school to study this particular interest in the cause of Christ's kingdom.

Rev. Zehring spoke on The Organized Adult Bible Class. He laid great stress on having the class organized with the different officers and committees, and that in this way would interest members to a higher plane and more good could be accomplished than in many other ways.

Each school received a Standard of Excellence, which contains ten points. These must be met in order that we compete for recognition at the county convention. Thus ended a very profitable Sunday School Convention. The people of Springhope showed by their attendance at the sessions that they were interested in the welfare of the convention.

New Pennsy Rule

The Pennsylvania Railroad has established a rule which shall debar from employment in its dining car and restaurant department any person with even a tendency toward a communicable disease.

There is to be a quarterly physical examination of every employe who has anything whatsoever to do with the preparation or serving of food. Dishwashers, kitchen helpers, cooks, and waiters, both white and colored, must undergo a rigid examination every three months, and only a 100 per cent. report on their physical condition will permit their remaining in the service.

Dr. Sears may be consulted at Bedford Wednesday, April 30, on diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat.
